

Giclee print:

“Giclee” comes from the French word meaning “a spray of liquid”. Giclee prints are as close to the original artwork as one can get. They are created from ultra high-resolution digital pictures of the original artwork and printed using seven cartridges of the very finest quality archival inks on acid free paper. Unlike other printed reproductions, Giclees are “Museum Quality” Fine-Art reproductions. The prints can be made on various surfaces such as canvas, watercolor or photobase paper. My prints are made on 300 lb. archival watercolor paper.

Generic prints

The images on my website can be purchased as limited edition prints.

Ketubot

The Ketubot that are displayed are generic prints, however the text needs to be added to the print. These images serve as “templates” to allow the client to choose their own text. I work with a Ketubot company and they provide choices of text (reform, conservative, orthodox as well as a variety of styles and wording). When the text is added and the Ketubah is signed, the print becomes an official Jewish marriage certificate.

Customized giclee prints

I have already created paintings for many of the torah portions and my goal is to create an illustration for all the torah portions. The paintings that are on display serve as “templates” for other b'nai mitzvah paintings. On my computer, I can easily customize an existing print and replace text and imagery either on the computer or by hand. This is a less expensive option than commissioning an original painting, while still providing a unique gift for the b'nai mitzvah child.

Original Painting

I enjoy creating original paintings. If the client chooses this option, the painting is completely original and created after an in depth conversation with the family about symbols from the torah portion or for the Ketubah, as well as, personal symbols that are significant to the child.

Invitations

In the case of b'nai mitzvah paintings, the family often chooses to use this original image on the child's b'nai mitzvah invitation. By using Photoshop, I am able to create a complete invitation (including return envelope, invitation, etc) and my prices are comparable to those at a traditional stationary store.
